Adesto Sancta Trinitas. HS:60r; 1520:2v; 1531:157v. 97

E with us, Ho- ly Tri-ni- ty, * co- equal Light, one De- i- ty: Of all the crea- tures of thy hand, Supreme be-ginning with-out end. 2. Heaven's armies, with de-vout acclaim, A- dore and laud thy glorious name; And na-ture's three-fold fabric thee, Doth bless throughout e- ter- ni- ty.

3. With heavenward gaze they servants now To thee in adoration bow; O, with the hymns of saints in light, Do thou our suppliant vows unite. 4. One brightness we acknowledge thee, The same we worship wondrous Three; Alpha and Omega we laud, And every spirit hails thee God.

5. Praise we the Father, born of none; Like praise unto his only Son; And praise, O Holy Ghost, to thee, God Triune, yet One, ever be. Amen.
On the Feast of the Most Holy Trinity.

\textit{V}. Let us bless the Father and the Son: with the Holy Ghost.
\textit{R}. Let us praise and exalt him above all for ever.

On the Feast of the Most Holy Trinity.

First Lesson.¹⁰⁴

E believe <in> the Holy Trinity, that is, the Father and the Son and the Holy Ghost, one almighty God, of one substance, of one essence, of one power, Creator of all creatures: from whom are all things, through whom are all things, in whom are all things. The Father of himself, not of the other, the Son begotten from the Father, very God of very God: true light of true light, not however two lights: but one light. The Holy Ghost proceeding from the Father and the Son: consubstantial and coeternal with the Father and the Son. But thou, O Lord.

Benedicat nos Deus. AS:288; 1520:3v; 1531:157v.¹⁰⁵

Ho-ly Ghost. †And may all.

Second Lesson.

T HE Father is in himself completely God, the Son is completely God, begotten of the Father, the Holy Ghost is completely God, proceeding from the Father and the Son. We do not, however, say that there are three Gods: but one God, the almighty, eternal, invisible, unchangeable, 106 which at once is everywhere, at once <is> present everywhere: not divided into parts, but wholly in all things, not locally but powerfully. Who without change to himself hath created changeable things, and governeth the created things: <yet> always remaining what he is. To whom nothing can be an accident, because of the single Divine Nature to which nothing can be added, nothing can be removed, because he is always that which is, to whom is the unique, to whom is the everlasting, to whom is the same, to be, to live, and to understand. But thou.

†And blessed be.

V. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son: and to the Holy Ghost. ‡For ever.

Third Lesson.

And these three are one God: and one God are these three. The same God and the Lord is the true and eternal Trinity in persons, true and everlasting Unity in substance, because the substance of the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit is one. In truth there is nothing greater in naming the three persons at once, than in naming one no matter which of the persons alone, because each and every person is full complete in himself. But thou.

Lesson iiiij. 108

They are not, however, three substances: but one God, one substance, one power, one essence, one eternity, one greatness, one goodness, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost. Neither is the Father different in nature than the Son or in nature than the Holy Ghost, nor are the Son and Holy Ghost different in nature than the Father, but the Father is different in person, the Son is different in person, <and> the Holy Ghost in person. In the Father abideth eternity: in the Son equality: in the Holy Ghost the connection of eternity and equality: all are one in substance, and in essence, and in omnipotence, and in deity. For just as the same Holy Trinity is inseparable in substance, in the same way

Sixth Lesson.

Lesson from the Holy Gospel according to John iii. (1-15.) [Lesson vii.]

At that time. There was a man of the Pharisees, named Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews. This man came to Jesus by night, and said unto him: Rabbi, we know that thou art come a teacher from God; for no man can do these signs which thou dost, unless God be with him. And that which followeth.

A Homily of the Venerable Bede, Priest.
(12. secundi libri.) 115

As ye have heard, beloved brethren, from the reading of the holy Gospel: a ruler of the Jews came to Jesus in the night: wishing by speaking with him secretly, to learn more fully the mysteries of the faith: of which, to a point disclosed by the revealing of signs, he had already learned the rudiments. Who seeing that he prudently took care to understand that which he saw being done by Him: he deserved to investigate more profoundly 116 that which he sought from Him. Rabbi (saith he), we know that thou art come a teacher from God; for no man can do these signs which thou dost, unless God be with him.

E thus confessed that Jesus had come from God to reveal His magisterial heavenly summons to the world, and understood God to be with Him in producing miracles: but nevertheless he did not yet recognize Him to be God. But because he had come to know the teacher of truth, he undertook to be studiously taught: he rightly submitted to be perfectly taught the knowledge of His divinity, and rightly of both His births, namely the divine and the human, but also learned the secret mysteries of His passion and ascension: and also too became acquainted with the way of the second birth, and the entry into the heavenly kingdom, and many other sacraments, by the teachings of the Gospel, the Lord revealing them.

Lesson ix.

NOW Jesus answered, and said to him: Amen, amen I say to thee, unless a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God. Which statement as much as it is clearly apparent to all the faithful: so much is it understood, because without this light they cannot be faithful. Who indeed without the bath of regeneration can obtain the remission of sins, and enter the kingdom of heaven? But Nicodemus who came by night to Jesus: had not yet come to know the mysteries of the light. For even the night in which he came marketh his ignorance by which he was oppressed. For indeed he was not yet reckoned of the company of them, to which the Apostle saith, You were heretofore darkness, but now light in the Lord: but rather he remained among those, to whom Isaiah speaketh, Arise be enlightened, O Jerusalem, for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee. Whatever Feast should fall on this day, let it be deferred until the morrow if it be free of a Feast of ix. If however the Feast of Saint Augustine should fall on this day: let it be deferred until the morrow and at Second Vespers of the Holy Trinity let a solemn Memorial be made of Saint Augustine. At this [ii.]

Vespers it is not the custom for a Memorial to be made of a Feast of iii. Lessons without Rulers of the Choir that may fall on the morrow: unless a Feast of ix. Lessons should be adjoining it, then a solemn Memorial will be made of both.
During the three following days the service of the Trinity will be made without Rulers of the Choir until the Festival of Corpus Christi: unless any Feast shall run between, whether of ix. Lessons or of iij., or of the Commemoration of Blessed Mary or of the Saint of the Place shall be made. And when a service of the Trinity is made at Matins, let the Invitatory, Hymn, Antiphons and Psalms [be sung] as on the first day, the VV. and Responsories according to the order of the Nocturns, and three lessons are read.

Lesson j.

We give thanks and we believe that the holy and ineffable Trinity, the Father and the Son, and the Holy Ghost, one God, are naturally of one substance, of one nature: and of one majesty and power. And that indeed the Father is not begotten, not created, but unbegotten, is by us professed. For He hath brought forth the beginning from nothing: from whence the nativity of the Son and the proceeding of the Holy Ghost are undertaken. Therefore he is the source and the origin of whole of the divinity.

Lesson iij.

The very Father himself, indeed ineffable, hath ineffably begotten the substance of his Son: yet the same is not other than what he himself is. God hath brought forth God, light from light. From Him therefore is all the paternity in heaven and in earth. Also the Son is of the substance of the Father without beginning before the the world was born, nor yet do we confess that he was made: because neither has the Father at any time existed without the Son, nor the Son without the Father. And yet not as the Son is from the Father so is the Father from the Son: because not the Father from the Son, but the Son received the generation from the Father. But thou.

Lesson iii.

The Son, therefore, is God from the Father: but the Father is not God from the Son. For he is the Son of the Father: and God from the Father. However the Son is equal in all things to the Father: for neither Weekdays after the Trinity.

did he ever take up his beginning nor cease. Here also he is believed of one substance with the Father. Because he is called omousyon with the Father: that is of one substance with the Father. For Omo in Greek is one, usia to be sure is called substance: which joined together denoteth one substance. For it is neither from nothing, nor from any other substance: but from the womb of the Father, that is from the his substance, that the same Son is believed to be begotten or born. But thou.

Ps. Te Deum. [47].

Before Lauds V. Blessed art thou, O Lord. 1729.
